NEW PUBLICATIONS.

POETIC STUDIES, by Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, contains a choice collection of poems all of remarkable sweetness which the reader can but admire. The little volume is one which readers of poetry will delight to read and study. James R. Osgood & Co., Publishers, Boston. For sale at Messrs. D. Bugbee & Co.'

LOVE AFLOAT. This is a story of the American Navy, which will be of interest to the most of novel readers as it differs from most stories of the sea in that it introduces a great variety of incident and thrilling adventures not usually found in such tales. The author, F. H. Sheppard, U. S. N., has blended the scenes and incidents in a vivid and interesting way that will be pleasing to the majority of readers. Sheldon & Co., Publishers, New York. For sale by Messrs. D. Bugbee & Co.

Philadelphia is to have an unusual display of pyrotechnics at the approaching Fourth of July. Among the larger display pieces will be a representation of the Goddess of Liberty mounted upon a pedestal, the figure to be sixteen feet high. Forming an arch over the head will be, in letters of fire, the passage "Proclaim Liberty throughout the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof." About the arch will be a representation of the old Independence bell surmounted by an eagle, and over all the American flag. The height of this design will be sixty feet. To the right of the central design will be displayed the arms of the state of Pennsylvania, with the legend "1776, Centennial 1876," and to the left, of a similar size, the arms of the city of Philadelphia, with "1776, Independence, 1876," over them. The width of the whole design will be about two hundred feet.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

Lewiston will not celebrate the Fourth of July.

The Grand Trunk railroad sells round trip tickets from Lewiston to Portland to the State Convention for $1.

The Lewiston Journal says that on Saturday afternoon Sheriff Littlefield ordered a man out of the jail workshop yard, when the man struck him in the face and then drew a revolver upon him. Immediately a third party stepped in between the assailant and the sheriff and the assailant left the premises. The man who attacked the sheriff is a person who has been employed at the head of the bottoming department of the jail workshop.

Aroostook.

The Aroostook Pioneer says: Hon. Chas. Shaw and Nathaniel Dustin, Esq., of Dexter, are guests at the Exchange. They are here for the purpose of selecting a site for an extensive tannery but have not as yet decided upon the locality.

Cumberland.

The Press says that the case of Webster vs. Washington for Congress is to be heard before the Law Court at its session in Portland in July. Colonel Thompson who defeated General Butler for Congress last fall, and General B. F. Butler himself are for the plaintiff, and A. P. Gould of Thomaston for the defence.

In the Circuit Court at Portland, Monday morning, the case Manhattan Medicine Co. vs. Nathan Wood, was taken up. A motion was made to dissolve the restraining order, but it was postponed. This motion is to restrain Wood from using the trade mark for Atwood's Vegetable Jaundice Bitters. The hearing was postponed fifteen days, on a provisional motion.

Hancock.

There was quite a heavy frost at Castine on Wednesday night of last week.

Washington.

The Machias Republican says a fire raged from the woods of Mr. Francis Foss at Jonesport, last week, which run over his woodland, completely destroying a valuable second growth of white birch. Mr. Foss estimates his loss at not less than $500. Mr. Geo. Farnsworth also suffered considerable loss from the same fire.

The Machias Republican announces the programme of the Centennial next Saturday. A procession will be formed composed of two G. A. R. Posts, soldiers of the war of 1812 and other associations. Geo. Walker will be President of the day. Hon. George F. Talbot orator and Ignatius Sargent toast master.

The selectmen of Whitneyville have signed a paper in their official capacity in which they solicit subscriptions to rebuild the house of a noted counsellor in that town. They do not subscribe themselves nor has any man in that town. The Republican advises people there not to pay money for that purpose.

State at Large.

The Journal says that the arrangements for "pooling" the earnings of the Boston & Maine and Eastern railroads are not fully perfected although committees from both roads have full powers to make such arrangements. The committee hold a meeting on Saturday.

The Folly of Neglect.

It is the height of folly to neglect precautionary measures for the preservation of health when they become necessary in consequence of hurtful influences. Among these influences are the unavoidable inhalation of malarious or fetid air, exposure in bad weather, unhealthy occupations and habits of late hours, all of which tend to produce disease. To guard against their effects a vigorous and regular discharge of the bodily functions should be kept up. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the tonic, of all others, best calculated to perpetuate bodily vigor and regularity. The experience of denizens of unhealthy localities, out-door laborers, employees in manufactories, and late workers of all kinds has shown that a wineglassful of this pleasant safeguard taken at regular intervals imparts an amount of stamina and power of resistance to disease afforded by no other protective and remedial agent. The nervous, the weak and the dyspeptic derive incalculable benefit from its use, and pronounce it the best preparation of its class.

THURSDAY, JUNE 10, 1875.

Republican Caucuses.

The Republican Voters of Bangor are requested to meet at the usual places of ward meetings in the several wards, on FRIDAY EVENING, June 11th, at 7½ o'clock, to select three delegates from each ward to attend the State Convention to be held in Portland, on the 15th instant, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Governor

Per order of the City Committee

EDWARD E. SMALL, Chairman.

Bangor, June 8th, 1875

Republican State Convention.

The Republicans of Maine are invited to send delegates to a State Convention to be held in

CITY HALL, PORTLAND,

Tuesday June 15th, 1875, at 11 o'clock, A. M., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for governor, and transacting any other business that may properly come before that Convention.

The basis of representation will be as follows:—

Each city, town and plantation will be entitled to one delegate and one additional for every 75 votes cast for the Republican candidate for Governor in 1874. A fraction of 40 votes additional to the full number for a delegate, is also entitled to a delegate.

Delegates are authorized to fill vacancies occurring in their own delegations from each city, town and plantation.

The State Committee will be in session at 30 o'clock on the morning of the Convention for the reception of credentials.

THE STATE CONVENTION.

We trust that there may be no need now for the Republican friends in this city and the communities of this section of the state to urge upon the duty of the duly elected delegates to our Republican State Convention which is to assemble in Portland on Tuesday next. It would seem that the preliminary canvass may have been the choice of a candidate for Chief Magistrate of Maine and the enunciation of sound principles for our party, including issues are matters which should always interest every Republican citizen and we hope that this important section of the state will be tragely and ably represented in the Convention which is to display our standard bearer and put forth a platform for the coming state campaign.

While the general expression of sentiment throughout the State seems to indicate the unanimous nomination of General Selden Connor, the evidence of harmony should not cause any of the friends of that gentleman or of any other candidate to underrate the importance of a full representation. It is considered that the preference of Maine Republicans shall not fail and free expression in the annual conference of the party to many respects the coming election will be of unusual importance and especially as the issues upon the great National questions which is to open next year. The selecting of a little inconvenience in attending the State Convention will prove a valuable service to the party in adding to the significance of the Convention and the very fact that it chances to be holden at some distance from our section this year should inspire additional effort to secure the attendance of delegates.

The Republican City Committee of Bangor has issued the call for caucuses to be held this evening to choose three delegates from each ward to represent our city in the Convention and we hope that our best citizens will take an interest in securing an exciting and worthy delegation. As a leading city in the State, and the commercial and political centre of Eastern Maine, Bangor should be heard in our Republican State Convention with no uncertain sound and that result can be assured by a full attendance of our citizens at the caucuses this evening and by a full response

THE NEW HAMPSHIRE CASE.

It will be seen by the extracts below that the leading journals of Boston express views similar to those presented in our editorial yesterday concerning the remarkable course pursued by the New Hampshire Judges and the mischievous consequences which must follow such a mode of action as they have promulgated. In their excessive anxiety to avoid the interference of one of the coordinate branches with another they have actually placed the control of the most important legislative branch in the hands of the Executive declaring that however illegally that branch may be constituted by the voluntary action of the Executive the only remedy lies in an appeal to the very men who may have been foisted into seats to which they have no shadow of title. We think the doctrine that the Judiciary are debarred from deciding questions of Constitutional authority because an Executive has chosen to construe a provision to suit his own designs, will excite considerable criticism among jurists. That doctrine does not seem to have been recognized by the Judiciary of this State, which enjoys a high character for learning and ability as it has recently acted upon an entirely different theory. Its opinion was asked as to the Constitutional power of the Executive in a matter upon which the Executive Department had already construed its authority, acted upon its construction and in accordance therewith invested a number of persons with important functions which they had exercised without question for a considerable period. The Court considered the question, decided that the Executive construction was erroneous and the Executive action thereunder became annulled. And we heard no Democratic complaint that the Judiciary was unduly interfering with the privileges of a co-ordinate branch, while the people supposed that the Court was simply performing its duty in deciding a mooted question of Constitutional construction.

We quote extracts from the Boston Journal and Advertiser, Republican, the independent Globe, and the Concord Monitor. The Boston Post, of course, applauds the action which temporarily shields the Democratic chicanery in New Hampshire. None of our Maine exchanges of Wednesday have any editorial comments upon the case

[From the Boston Journal.]

The opinion of the Superior Court of New Hampshire on the Senatorial matter appears to have "gone off on another point," as the lawyers say, or "Point-no-point," as it will rather strike most plain people. Such have always been inclined to consider the judges of our courts as no respecters of persons or dignitaries. It has been supposed that their business is to interpret the laws, and to pronounce them upon all cases of violation properly coming before them, no matter what may be the stations of any persons affected thereby—the humblest and the highest alike. This function of the judges of the highest courts their prerogative. Worse, any "non-appointee" may refer by Austrian rule to the Court of New Hampshire. The Governor of the State" in actual p the language of their rendered opinion, "does do what he pleases, and when it is done, nobody else is one of the great powers of the State," and we are another. It is not respectful for us to question the propriety of this course. In representing this as the tenor of the Judges' two opinions in this case we do not, of course, undertake to fix the precise limits of the application. We cannot do it, because the opinions themselves are so vague, and seem to turn aside so completely from grappling with the real question at issue.

The Republicans of New Hampshire certainly, cannot suffer from the course they have pursued in this matter. They have simply taken their stand upon the side of precedents, and have sought to get that light from the courts which their opponents resisted. They have seen one branch of the Legislature wrestle from them through the intervention of two members in a manner which they cannot but regard as unwarranted as it is totally unprecedented. The Superior Court, however, says there is no help for it, and they submit.

The whole controversy, in its sum and substance, will ultimately go over to the people of New Hampshire, and we have no misgivings as to the result. They will evade nothing, for their jurisdiction is supreme and unquestioned.

[From the Boston Advertiser.]

In short, the Court decides that the canvassing of votes having been left to the Governor and Council, the manner in which they performed that duty is subject to revision only by the body having the constitutional right of revision; in this case by the Senate which has considered indirectly upon the matter and sustained the Governor. This, however, by no means supports the Democratic view of the case. It cannot be construed as an approval of Governor Weston's course. If the Court has taken the right view of its duty,—and we presume it will not be disputed,—it is inconsistent with the grave charges imposed upon them to refuse to settle it. In so doing they have acknowledged their own dignity and incompetence respecting them. The Senate is the final judge of the election returns and qualifications of its own members, and any question arising therein could have been taken up in the first instance. That co-ordinate branch of the Government, the Executive Department, can fix, violation of the Constitution to intervene and decide an important question affecting these matters for us, thus permitting Messrs. Prince and Proctor to go to Concord as duly qualified Senators, although they had not received the majority of votes which the Constitution requires to entitle them to that right. Once there with the credentials thus unlawfully given them, they were admitted to act upon their own cases, and their presence making the Democratic majority of course it was decided by that Senate in their favor.

[From the Concord Monitor.]

The two extraordinary documents submitted to the House and Democratic Senate, this morning, by which the Superior Court have undertaken to give validity to the unconstitutional action of Governor Weston in notifying Priest and Proctor to appear and act as Senators, it is difficult to characterize as they deserve. They are as follows

I. The Court refuses to answer the House question, whether Governor Weston's action was unconstitutional.

II. They do give the Democratic Senate controlled five members elected, and even then claimed to be illegally there, an opinion that the two are legally there, and cannot be ousted except by the vote of the Senate, and the Senate having declared them elected, that no power can revise or reverse that decision. In other words the Court refuses to give an opinion constitutionally called for by a Senate whose legal existence is disputed, that even if such outrage has been committed it cannot be helped, the usurpation perpetrated itself.

A court which could thus lend itself to the perpetuation of a usurpation, has forfeited the confidence and respect of the people of the State, and cannot long survive the popular indignation which its action will evoke.

Mr Evarts concluded his great address in defence of Mr Beecher at 6.35 P. M., Tuesday, the Court having decided to extend the sitting after giving the jury a brief respite for exercise. The astounding portion of Mr. Evarts' argument was very eloquent and impressive, and was greeted with rounds of applause which the Court could not restrain. We regret our inability to lay the whole of this splendid forensic effort before our readers.

At a ladies' homeopathic fair in New York, lately, two handsome gold headed umbrellas and an elegant gold headed cane were voted to Mr. Beecher as the most popular clergyman. The next highest number of votes was given to Cardinal McCloskey.

Concerning the report that Judge E. R. Hoar has sustained the New Hampshire Democrats in a written opinion, the Boston Journal says: "At all events, supposing that Judge Hoar's opinion does not sustain the Democratic position just written, as he has given no opinion at all."

It is said from Washington that Secretary Bristow has instructed the Solicitor of the Treasury to prepare a bill to be introduced in Congress at the next session, providing for the appointment of a commission to investigate the whole subject of the Treasury Department, with a view to the reorganization of the Department, and the reduction of the number of employees.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

NEW HAMPSHIRE!

Legislature in Joint Convention!

A Republican Governor Elected!

PERSON C. CHENEY, GOVERNOR!

The Legislature in Joint Convention.

CONCORD, June 9. The House met at 10 o'clock, the Speaker in the chair. The reading of the journal was dispensed with. The Speaker proceeded to announce Charles H. Fenton and Arthur P. Shepard as pages. A batch of minor bills and petitions were presented, which were appropriately referred. A few minor bills were put upon their second reading and at 11 o'clock the Honorable Senate came into the Representatives' Hall, and the two bodies went into joint convention.

Canvassing the Returns for Governor.

On motion of Mr. Bingham, of Littleton, the Secretary of State was requested to lay the vote for Governor and Councillors before the joint convention. Having performed this duty, the Secretary of State, Treasurer and a committee of one from the Senate and three from the House was appointed by the chair to examine the votes for Governor, to which they attended, and reported as follows. Whole number of votes cast, 70,386; necessary for a choice, 35,194. Person C. Cheney, 1; Stephen Brooks, 1; Samuel H. Mills, 1; P. C. Cheney, 1; Alonzo Foss, 1; James A. Weston, 1; Samuel C. Gerrish, 1; Nathan S. Whitcher, 1; Samuel Hunt, 1; S. P. Cooper, 1; Marcus M. Pinpan, 1; Ira Smythe, 1; Austin F. Pike, 1; Henry M. Stone, 1; Luther McArthur, 1; Nathaniel White, 1; Person C. Cheney, 37,121; Harry R. Roberts, 30,121; Person C. Cheney, 38,292. George H. Sowell, Senator from District No. 10; Charles A. Abbott, of Raymouth, and W. A. Parker, of Portsmouth, Committee.

Preparing to Ballot for Governor

It was moved that the joint Convention proceed to ballot for the Constitutional candidates for Governor, and that the members of the Convention ballot as their names were called on the roll. Pending the vote a discussion upon the legality of proceeding in an election at this late day, was participated in by Messrs. Bingham of Littleton and Marcy of Portsmouth, Democrats, and Upham of Exeter, Republican, who said that the provisions of the Constitution referred to were hardly intended to be construed so as to deprive the Constitutional authorities of the right of an election. This seems to be the general sense of the Convention.

Mr Cheney Elected Governor on Joint Ballot.

The ballot was then taken which resulted as follows. Whole number of votes cast, 370; necessary to a choice, 190; Hiram Roberts had 186. Person C. Cheney 191, and Mr. Cheney was declared elected. The Joint Convention then rose. On motion of Mr. Morse of Nashua, a Committee was appointed by the chair to act with a committee from the Senate to notify the Hon. Person C. Cheney of his election. Various reports of State Commissioners and the Trustees of different State institutions were received until 12 15 P. M., the House adjourned.

Sale of Ayrshire Cattle.

PITCHBURG, June 9. The first of Capt. Eugene T. Mills' auction sales of pure breed Ayrshire cattle from his celebrated Maplewood herd was held this afternoon, on the fair grounds in this city. A large number were present and the sales were at low figures, the highest being for a cow (Lady Burns) to D. F. Chamberlain, of Worcester, for $4.0. Joel Tewksbury was the largest buyer among the other buyers were J. H. Harwood, of Littleton; W. H. P. Vaughan of Providence; and Stephen Shipley, of Hopkinton. The celebrated Bull Highlander brought only $60. The forty-four sold for about $2,000.

THE BROOKLYN TRIAL

Tilton's Friends Out in Force.

Beach Not Published Admonished.

SUMMING UP FOR THE PLAINTIFF

The Scene in Court—Beach's Friends Cheering his Entrance.

BROOKLYN, June 9 There was a scene of great excitement at the Brooklyn scandal court to-day. A very general desire prevails to hear Beach's impeachment of the great preacher, and fully four times as many people applied for admission this morning as the court could contain. Not half so many ladies came to court as during the Beecher days and it was manifest that the anti-Beecher locks have possession of the house to-day, for when Beach was squeezing his way through the closely packed throng he was recognized from the gallery and there was a sudden outburst of applause from that quarter in which nearly the entire audience joined. A second round of applause speedily followed, but it was soon checked by the officers. Immediately after Beach sat down another of the leading actors appeared on the stage. This was Fullerton, who had not been in court for some time before. He was dressed in a summer costume. Looks in remarkably good health and spirits, and was apparently pleased when another round of applause was got up in his honor. Mr. and Mrs. Beecher were absent to-day, but Colonel Beecher, E. Beecher and Miss Beecher were present.

Beach Opens his Argument.

After 11 o'clock Beach commenced to sum up for the plaintiff. He said at last Tilton had an opportunity of being heard in a Court of Justice. Pursued by a man whom the genius of Sam Wilkeson discovered to be the greatest man on earth, and by a great church organization he had a hearing only from a committee selected by the defendant himself. Even before that committee his evidence was shut out, his witnesses who knew most of the facts unsummoned, and in a case of this character a hasty snap judgment was pronounced. At this point Mr. and Mrs. Beecher, Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe came in.

Counsel went on, the question is whether in the temple of justice, the power of Plymouth church is to overcome the sense of equity which is the spirit of our administration. It a cause is to be won by clamor and vituperation by scandalous and dishonoring epithets repeated until they pain the ear, I have neither hope nor fears to win the verdict, but I speak to men of judgment. You control to-day the destinies of the greatest preacher and the destinies of this plaintiff and hold the power of vindicating his witnesses or consigning them to imperishable dishonor.

Whence have you that power? The law has selected you as intelligent men, and freighted you with these great interests. Events has assumed to know your sentiments. I know the influences that surround this trial. I have seen the ominous skulks hovering on the outskirts of this investigation. My friend wished for the eyes of Argus, he has them, and he has the hundred arms of Briareus, and he need not wish for the gold of Midas; he has it. You, sir, (to foreman), avowed you had formed opinions favorable to defendant, but you sat there before God and declared you would nevertheless give a verdict on the evidence alone. By what right does the gentleman assume to know that you are to adjudge the defendant innocent leaving the box. I have no arguments to offer, but I have a simple, ogneal argument to present. If there be not evidence, proven facts enough to satisfy the minds of twelve impartial and unprejudiced men, I want no verdict. I ask for no such condemnation of Henry Ward Beecher. But if in the face of all the chargable assumptions allowed by the law, you are satisfied our case is proved, then in the name of that law I ask for your verdict.

Counsel commended the great oratorical power of the opponent, and remarked that if it were true, as they say, that plaintiff has no case, it was singular that they should spend fifteen days in refuting it. Most of the one hundred days' investigation was spent not on the question of defendant's guilt or innocence, but in abusive epithets of plaintiff. The accusation that Tilton is hollow and theatrical comes sounds but curiously from Porter, who had shown the highest histrionic ability in this case. If Beecher is innocent, he needs no such clamorous defenses; and if Tilton is an adulterer, it could be proved from evidence, but it was a necessity of defence that his counsel spent thirteen days in destroying his accusers, and on that demand a verdict for defendant.

Tilton was represented by Porter as a seducer and a subtle conspirator. Tracy on the contrary declares him a blunderer. All admit him to be as Beecher does a man of genius. He showed no malevolence on the stand and he never uttered a word of censure or reproof against his wife, but with Christian magnanimity he forgave her. What Beecher says is believed he thought the greatest outrage that can be committed against a husband, and manfully he kept his pledges until goaded into presenting the case in a court of justice. He is accused of fabricating the charge, of suborning perjury, and marshalling the hosts of perjurers with devilish cunning, but the jury remember Beecher's expression, "I would die if Elizabeth knows how generous Theodore has been. Theodore has the hardest part to bear."

Philosophers and poets have paid no such tribute to friendship as that given by Beecher to Frank Moulton. Beecher is a great man, but censured mist like exception to him as related to the dignity of being purely good and sinless, too good and too pure to commit this sin. This good man has some testimony to the integrity and fidelity of those who accuse him, but the difficulty was, those who have an interest in Beecher have always been fighting against the gendrous impulses of his nature; first in the prosecution of Tilton before the Church Committee, and now in his unworthy and unjust defence. A man like this is an unpleasant one, which should never be disclosed to the public except for important necessity. The parties were all agreed to conceal, and kept concealed, but the secret necessary leaked out.

When Mrs. Morse wrote to Beecher that Tilton had been telling persons about the matter he begged for silence and sent Bell to Halliday to suppress the investigation. He wrote to his nephew Perkins to put his foot in the hot embers of the scandal. The tripartite contract which he signed was a decave for carrying out the policy of silence. He wrote to Tilton to resign his membership of Plymouth church so that there could be no investigation. What he deprecated the ruinous defence and wrote about "the devices we have adopted to save ourselves" he contemplated the policy of silence, but the most notable instance of a desire for concealment was when he resolved a letter from Mrs. Bradshaw he refused to communicate with her, and finally in his letter to the church committee he writes that the policy of silence ought to have succeeded.

Counsel said he would now proceed to consider the defence on the question of giving the defence the benefit of every doubt arising. Porter has misapplies the legal doctrine applying to criminal cases. Beecher is entitled to no more presumption of innocence than if it was an action on a promissory note, when satisfactory evidence is given for the plaintiff's case, and passed to the jury by the court, the presumption changes. Conceding that we start with the presumption of innocence shielding the defendant, when that shield is broken by proof, what becomes of the presumption?

Counsel quoted from Greenleaf on evidence, that the jury in a civil suit must decide in favor of the party for whom the evidence preponderates, but in criminal cases evidence must exclude every hypothesis but that of guilt; also People vs. Ryder, 12th New York.

Upon this counsel argued that the presumption changes in civil cases, but the burden of clearing himself rests on the defendant as soon as the plaintiff's case is in. As to the genuine character of Tilton for publishing the letters written to him by his wife in marital confidence, Beach referred the jury to Bell's testimony. This was done contrary to counsel's request, and at a time when both the defendant's wife circumstantially contradicted the statements contained in the letters. Tilton was condemned for publishing the private letters of his wife, but Beecher's counsel have published some indiscretion, such as Bowman of the Independent, but the letters from Beecher to Tilton, contrast as follows:

JOHAN BOGRAZ.

"But I will tell a part of myself because the best man in all the world loves me." Instead of it being the case that Tilton in this question would pamper appetite, it was the question of the defendant which had satiates at nothing to destroy the opponent.

As to proofs there were no witnesses of the actual commission of the offence. The complaint charges that it was committed on two certain days and divers others at the house of the plaintiff and house of the defendant. Counsel did not know whether the seduction took place in Beecher's house or where or when, but the complaint was framed in the ordinary way and made as definite and connected as it was possible on the allegations with the knowledge from his wife. Counsel said when Elizabeth Denis who was present at the time, was planted Mrs. Tilton at her house was a cousin of Tilton and a friend of Mrs. Tilton, and acted as housekeeper in Mrs. Tilton's confinement during which Mrs. Tilton returned from the country Miss Dennis sat in the same place. Tilton exercised no control in the matter. There was nothing to offend a wife's feelings in that. He gives rudely repelled his wife for troubling him with domestic details. Miss Dennis highest intellectual attainments have manifested almost boorishness at trivial matters in the household.

Bessie Turner's account of the transaction is imperfect and Miss Dennis is in her grave. However the conduct of Tilton in her house is a matter of no great importance to the jury. He may have a ludicrous manner of wandering from bed to bed looking for the softest one, but it gave to Beecher no license to seduce his wife. He may have been moody and rude and the shock his wife's reverence for home and marriage, but it gave Beecher no right to take advantage of these circumstances. Granted that he was an inmate of Woodhill and trespassed in all domestic proprieties and viler than the vile seduced girl committed to his care, must defendant's sin therefore go unrebuked? (Recess taken.)

Mr. Beach continued during the afternoon, dwelling chiefly on points taken up by Judge Porter in his summing up, and presenting Tilton as the injured party, who had suffered from Beecher's course so until he was driven to ask redress in a court of justice.

OVER THE RANGE.

BY P. H. MYERS.

Half sleeping, by the fire I sit,
I start and wake, it is no strange
That my self sleeps, and Tom
Are up the Range.

We brought him in with heavy feet,
And eased him down, from eye to eye,
Through no one spoke, there passed a fear
That Tom must die.

He smiled when the sun was low,
And spoke, I thought the words were strange,
He uttered slightly and I must go
Across the Range."

What, Tom?" he smiled and nodded, "Yes,
I know it's struck 8 o'clock mates Jim, you know
The person I mean, you'll come soon —
Now Tom must go

I brought his sweetheart's pictured face,
Again that smile, so sad and strange,
Tell her" so all he said "that Tom has gone
Across the Range"

The last light lingered on the hill,
Then on Pine, somewhere, then he said,
And lay and eye, and habit were still,
And Tom was dead

Half sleeping by the fire I sit,
I start and wake it is no strange
That I myself sleep, and Tom
Across the Range

MAKING LOVE IN THE DARK.

(Concluded.)

[How could you admit that fellow to-night when you expected me?"

I beg your pardon, Dr. Collins,' she replied with her sunny black eyes dancing, 'you are very much mistaken. I did not expect you to-night and that fellow is one of my best friends.'

Must we quarrel with me? Have you forgotten what transpired in the hall only last night?'

What transpired in the hall, pray, that Mrs. Goodin ought to be sure?'

You must be unmanned, for are often using under some hallucinations. I was not in Mrs. Goodin's veranda with you for a single moment last night, and if you made any engagements with any young lady at that time and place, it was most with your humble servant.'

With you! Be zapped, pale to the lips! Who the Hunc stars is, then, I should like to know.

I must say you should not be so careless of her. No doubt some fair lovely creature is at this moment looking her eyes out while you are wasting time with me. But I must go back, or Cinthy will be jealous. Yes sah I have a trifling bit of confidence for you. We are engaged.'

Oh! Don't I know it? he exclaimed, tearing her hands with a violent jerk.

You, sir, and the audacity to call my charley a fellow, and to be angry because I refused on my self to him on account of your simplicity in thinking the matter. Mr. Collins, I'm sorry you had informed me of your engagement! O! goodness, what I see, it is I must believe me to be!'

He rushed when the sun was low,
And spoke, I thought the words were strange,
He uttered slightly and I must go
Across the Range"

What, Tom
